Biography Jeanne Petrosky and Dennis Guzenski

Jeanne Petrosky has always loved creating! Studying painting, drawing, sculpture, etching, graphic arts, and pottery, Jeanne graduated from Montgomery County Community College in Montgomery County PA, with an associate degree. Moving onto Tyler School of Art in Philadelphia she next focused her talents on crafts ~ glass blowing, jewelry, and weaving. Not feeling fulfilled at Tyler, she left after completing one year to become a stained glass designer and graphic artist for a craft store. She went on to work as a graphic artist for an advertising agency, and work for a custom framer.

In 1987, Jeanne met a woman at a party who made paper. Having always loved paper and fiber, the first thing out of her mouth was “I’d like to try that.” The connection to making paper was immediate! Since papermaking in itself is simple to learn, this allowed the creativity to flow. The addiction started the first time someone bought the work. She got into the American Craft Council Show (one of the more prestigious at the time), quit her day-jobs and began pursuing her art full time.

Not being one to stay still in a specific style, Jeanne continues to experiment, and grow as an artist. Travels to such destinations as the Grand Canyon, Egypt, Japan, and Nepal have lead to her current minimalist style with husband Dennis Guzenski. Meeting, marrying, and making art collaboratively with Dennis has been a tremendous joy. In 2007 they decided to work together full time, merging their different sensibilities and allowing a dream to come true for both of them. Neither could or would want to do the work without the other!

Dennis Guzenski has always loved drawing! Dennis’ fine art career evolved from the world of decorative arts. He came to painting by way of many different careers including the painting the exteriors of Victorian homes. Tired of having to depend on good weather, limited work time, and varying roof heights, he was open to pursuing new avenues. Faux Finishing captured his interest in 1991. Dennis sought to study these techniques, and enrolled in the country’s oldest faux finishing school in NYC. At Finishing School, Inc. Dennis fell in love with the process. There he mastered the art of rendering faux marble, wood grains, Italian Landscape Murals, Venetian plastering, and other sophisticated decorative finishes. His growing interest in learning many new decorative painting and designer wall finishes eventually turned into a business. Dennis’ talented hand from thirty years of faux finishing has lead to his fine art collaborations with wife and partner Jeanne Petrosky.

In 2002 Jeanne and Dennis met, beginning a journey of partnership, and collaborations in the studio. The fine art of Jeanne Petrosky and Dennis Guzenski is now a completely collaborative effort. Their bold approach to papermaking has won them numerous awards. They are published in multiple books, and their work can be seen at the country’s most acclaimed shows including the Philadelphia Craft show, Smithsonian Craft Show, American Craft Council and the AmericanCraft Exposition. Jeanne Petrosky and Dennis Guzenski’s art is included in private, and corporate collections across the USA, Korea, Japan and England.
